

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A terminal transmits via a control channel to another terminal a command demanding header configuration modification. Then the former terminal continues to receive frames with configuration before the modification and at the same time waits for frames with configuration after the modification.